GW501516 (also known as GW-501516, GW1516, GSK-516 and endrobol) is a PPAR receptor. It activates the same pathways activated by exercise, including PPAR and AMP-activated protein kinases. It has been studied as a potential treatment for obesity, diabetes, dyslipidemia, and cardiovascular disease. GW501516 is synergistic when combined with AICAR: In animal studies, the combination has been shown to significantly improve exercise tolerance than either compound alone.

Usage

Endurance athletes can improve exercise endurance by stacking this PPAR with the AMP-like drug AICAR, or by running alone. As a result, they will have a greater ability to hit higher RPMs during a run without reaching their maximum heart rate. For fitness enthusiasts, kenafine has two benefits:

1. Its ability to burn fat
2. It helps athletes perform harder and longer workouts without getting out of breath.

Application

In obesity, cardarine reverses metabolic abnormalities in obese and prediabetic men by stimulating fatty acid oxidation. That is, it burns fat by increasing glucose uptake in skeletal muscle tissue, which changes the body's metabolism to burn fat for energy instead of muscle or carbohydrates. Incredibly, none of this lowered blood sugar levels like diabetes medications did. Interestingly, when the mice ate a high-fat diet, they still lost fat, demonstrating that cardarine protects against obesity.

Function

Cardarine has been studied as a potential treatment for obesity, diabetes, dyslipidemia and cardiovascular disease. GW501516 can be used as a drug to improve the physical performance of athletes. The most common uses of GW include ultimate stamina and recovery increases. Another major use of GW-501516 is to aid in fat loss. GW-501516 has been proven to melt fat quickly.

GW501516 is a PPAR $\alpha$  receptor.

Cardarine activates the same pathways activated by exercise, including PPAR $\alpha$  and AMP-activated protein kinase. Cardarine has been studied as a potential treatment for obesity, diabetes, dyslipidemia and cardiovascular disease. GW501516 is synergistic when combined with AICAR: In animal studies, the combination has been shown to significantly improve exercise tolerance than either compound alone.

Dosage:

The half life of cardarine is 20-24 hours. This means that once a day dose is totally fine. Some athletes like to use all the 20 mg an hour before their workout session, and others will split the dose in half in the AM and PM.
